

I signed up for the no call list just days before the deadline, but had not been on the list during the prior period. The number of telemarketing calls to my home phone was getting ridiculous. We just didn't answer the phone any more. Many times the same company would call night after night even though you told them "no, not interested" the first time. Most don't take no for an answer, so I would have to hang up on them which I don't like to do because I feel it is rude. Since I have been on the list, these calls have reduced considerably and I would like it to stay that way.

If I discontinue doing business with a company, more than likely I have a good reason for doing so. I can understand one call from that company to find out why I discontinued their service and to see if I would reconsider. After that, it is just pestering and aggressive pressure sales tactics. If after that one call attempt, I chose to do business with the company again, I am perfectly capable of seeking them out on my own.

Please do not change the no-call regulations in Wisconsin.
